

Distance Learning

Distance learning has become more mainstream as people and districts are searching for alternatives to the traditional forms of educational services. Many consumers opt for distance learning solutions because of the convenience factor, as they work full time and do not want to spend hours in the classroom each week. In addition, many K-12 schools use distance-learning services to bring certain classes to their students that may not be offered within that school itself.

There is a host of distance learning options from which to choose, and at CameraWATCH Corporation, we are more than happy to discuss these tools with you. Some schools are eligible for e-Rate discounting, which means that the government will pay a portion of the cost of products and services you buy. If you are not eligible for this e-Rate assistance, we do offer financing options that can allow you to get the technology you need now while providing you with an affordable payment plan. Please contact us at 1-866-420-4232, or via email at info@camerawatch.net, and we will gladly discuss your options with you, also feel free to visit our website www.camerawatch.net for additional information.

The Value of Distance Learning

With school budgets being cut left and right, schools are finding it more challenging to provide necessary educational resources to their students. The result is that students can lag behind in certain areas, which is never an acceptable solution. Fortunately, with distance learning services, all students can get the education they need, regardless of their location. Classes are taught in "real time" and can be viewed using a computer and a set of headphones. This is a smart alternative for students who attend school in rural locations and may not have access to the instruction they need.

Technology continues to bring new advancements that make the challenge of obtaining a solid education more realistic. With distance learning services, all lessons can be digitally archived and viewed again at a later date. Students have access to courses that may not be offered in their own schools, and school districts can communicate with each other quickly and easily. There is a whole new world of products and services available that can greatly enhance the traditional learning experience. Call us today for more details.
